On this book: This handbook addresses new security dangers as a result of global environmental change, especially due to global climate change, desertification, water stress, population growth and urbanization that may lead to forced migration, crises and conflicts. These challenges are dealt with by the United Nations, OECD, NATO and the EU. In 100 peer-reviewed chapters 132 authors from 49 countries assess the global debate on human, environmental, energy, food, health and water security.
